Collective Impact Proposal Guidance

February 14, 2019

Purpose

This guidance is for organizations proposing programs or projects that advance a collective impact (CI) initiative on Aquidneck Island. CI proposals differ from other Foundation requests because they are judged both on the results the applicant will achieve and on how those results contribute to the population-level goals of a shared initiative.

Before You Apply

Applicants must discuss a potential CI proposal with Foundation staff and with the backbone organization of the relevant initiative before beginning an application. Proposals are submitted through the Foundation's online portal by invitation, using the Collective Impact Application.

What a Strong Proposal Includes

- A clear connection to the initiative's common agenda and at least one shared measure.
- A description of the applicant's role and the mutually reinforcing activities it will carry out.
- An anticipated results statement at the performance level (what will change for participants) and a description of the expected contribution to population-level change.
- A plan for reporting data to the initiative's shared measurement system.
- A letter of support from the initiative's backbone organization.

Population-Level vs. Performance-Level Results

Population-level results describe conditions for everyone in a community (for example, the share of island third graders reading on grade level). Performance-level results describe what changes for the people a specific program serves (for example, 40 of 55 tutored students gain one reading level). The Foundation asks CI applicants to commit to performance-level results and to explain how they contribute to the population-level result.

Review

CI proposals follow the Foundation's regular Board calendar and deadlines. Staff may consult the initiative's steering committee during review.
